Together, S4SK and H4SS work to bring real change to the lives of severely deprived children.

S4SK and H4SS, a brief history:

We opened our first class for out-of-school children, and awarded our first scholarships in 2007 on the initiative of John McConnell, a British Quaker, who was teaching conflict resolution skills in Yangon at the time.

Scholarships for Street Kids (S4SK) was established as a UK charity in 2009 (Reg. No: 1131559). By 2013 there was a strong team of staff and supporters in Myanmar, and we formed a local NGO which, in 2016, registered as Hope for Shining Stars (H4SS), (Reg. No: 1/PT/0172). H4SS's Governing Board includes professional educationalists, and a former Department of Social Welfare director. John McConnell serves as Chief Advisor. H4SS staff and Governing Board include Buddhist, Christian, Hindu and Muslim faiths, and we provide the same opportunities to children of all ethnic and religious backgrounds. Approximately 50% of our students are girls. Last year, S4SK funded around 37% of H4SS work, the rest coming from ChildFund Myanmar (47%), Burmese Community Development Collaboration (3%), and an emergency contribution from ChildFund Korea (13%).

The children we are here to help:

Some of our children at work, cow-herding, fishing for crabs, carrying wood, washing bottles, and collecting freshwater oysters

Most of the children we help are out-of-school and working long hours each day from as young as 8 or 9. They make bricks, peel beans, carry building materials, and scavenge for recyclables to contribute to the family income. Their families have been illiterate for generations and regard child labour as normal. There are monastic schools which are completely free of charge, but these families cannot afford the loss of income incurred by children attending school full-time. Thus, child-labourers become trapped in poverty, unable to access education at the time in their lives when they need to be in school. Provision of education alone is not enough; it needs to be paralleled with care for the economic situation of the families.

The structure of this report: This booklet consists of two parts. Part 1, 'Annual report - strategy and achievements in 2020-21', describes what has been achieved in the last financial year, that is up till March 2021. For most of this time, the areas where we work were relatively peaceful, though affected by the pandemic. Part 2, entitled 'Current work and appeal', relates to ongoing work, all of which is taking place in the context of the emergency following the military coup on 1st February 2021. Due to the limitations on travel because of the pandemic, and restrictions placed on the internet by the military, the quality of photographs available to us is somewhat lower than in previous reports. Please bear with us.

Part 1: Annual report - strategy and achievements in 2020-21

Over the past 14 years, we have developed a strategy that releases children from poverty and gives them access to education, solving problems on the way. In this difficult period too, we have been adjusting provision to best meet the needs of our very poor families:

Taking temperatures before class

NFE classes in small groups

1. Accessible education: Activity-based non-formal education (NFE) classes are fun and require no previous schooling. Because of Covid, some classes were run in shifts with small socially-distanced groups, often outdoors, and with additional homework. After the coup and the unpredictable violence that followed, we immediately began using self-study worksheets coupled with home visits. Last year H4SS provided NFE to 277 children (159 boys + 118 girls) in 26 NFE classes, of which 11 classes and 131 class places were funded by S4SK, and 146 (79 boys and 67 girls by ChildFund Myanmar (CFMM)).

2. Compensation for lost income: Family Support (FS) payments compensate families for lost earnings while children are in class. This is paid monthly to parents, and the occasion used to engage with them. However, as pandemic and coup began to affect the livelihoods of our families, we shifted to a system of emergency support, better to respond to the needs of families (see below on p7).

3. Transition from NFE to formal education (FE): Every year, some students transfer from NFE classes to FE. Last year, 64 students (29 boys and 35 girls) intended to transfer to state schools, 43 of whom due to be funded by S4SK, and 21 by CFMM. However, state schools had to close because of Covid, so we welcomed them all back to our NFE classes, and taught them using their formal school books.

4. Study guidance (SG) for poor students at state schools facing public exams: It is traditional in Myanmar for students in state schools to receive private tuition to prepare them for public exams. While SG is not expensive, there are some who simply cannot bear the cost. To improve the chances of these students, H4SS offers free SG classes in two locations. However, because of the closure of schools, and risk of infection, we changed the focus of these sessions to supervised self-study in small groups at the teachers' homes. Last year, 28 students (11 boys and 17 girls) benefitted from this, all funded by S4SK.

NFE classes held outdoors in order to reduce the risk of infection

5. Successive opportunities: Provision of successive opportunities for education and training to bring about real change in children's lives has been a key part of our philosophy from the start. Income-generating activities during the NFE curriculum are followed by scholarships for making the transition from NFE to formal education, vocational training or further study:

a. Vocational training (VT): VT scholarships last year included sewing and tailoring, hairdressing, electrical appliance maintenance, welding, auto repair, and air-con servicing. Because of the pandemic and coup, not all students could complete their courses, and will be able to resume their studies once the emergency is over. Last year, H4SS provided 58 VT scholarships (11 boys and 47 girls), with S4SK providing 38 places, and CFMM providing 20 places.

b. Vocational training college: One of the best routes to further education available is via the Swiss-funded colleges: Education for Youth (E4Y) at 14 years of age, followed by the Centre for Vocational Training (CVT) at 17. Our students live at the Learning Centre and commute to E4Y and CVT each day. During the period of the pandemic, these institutions adjusted classes to reduce the risk of infection, and provided online tuition in the initial weeks following the coup. H4SS supported E4Y and CVT students with parallel classes and use of computers at the Learning Centre. However, with the restrictions placed on the internet following the coup, online tuition was no longer accessible by students, and provision was temporarily suspended. Also, in order to maintain social distancing, we had to limit numbers staying at the Learning Centre. Then, on account of the widespread insecurity following the military coup on 1st February 2021, most students were sent home with laptops or tablets to help them study. Last year 30 students (12 boys and 18 girls) had enrolled for E4Y and CVT. The costs of the Learning Centre and all E4Y and CVT students are funded by S4SK.

Maung Myat Min who is studying cuisine and is in his first year at CVT

6. Disability inclusion: We welcome disabled students to our classes. Last year, H4SS taught 32 disabled children (18 boys and 14 girls), with 19 class places funded by S4SK.

7. Emergency support: The combination of pandemic and coup has devastated the livelihoods of many of our families. Teachers educated children and parents as to Covid hygiene, provided food and hygiene hampers to families in need, and responded whatever problems the families faced. Last year, H4SS provided support to 350 households, 173 funded by S4SK, 156 by CFMM, and 21 by BCDC. Being forced deeper into poverty carries the risk that families are pushed into taking loans against their children's future labour, something we do what we can to avoid (See pages 11-13).

During the Covid period, savings scheme members, who used to meet at the H4SS Learning Centre, could deposit or withdraw their money near their homes

8. Poverty alleviation: Many of our families are in debt to money-lenders at interest rates of between 20% and 30% per month. H4SS runs a savings scheme and low-interest top-up loan fund, which together can mitigate or remove family debt in time for NFE alumni to access full-time vocational training or further education. There is a strong social side to the scheme, with groups meeting every month to deposit savings, adjudicate loan applications from savers, check their interest, share income-generating plans, and encourage each other. During the pandemic we arranged meetings outdoors around the school bus. Broadly, the initiative has worked well, with 39 families saving overall. Across these families:

- 6 families have managed to get out of debt to moneylenders,
- 22 families received loans from the savings scheme and were repaying regularly until the emergency,
- 3 families have repaid their top-up loans completely,
- 1 family receiving a top-up loan left the scheme and is unlikely to repay.

The top-up loan was funded by Quaker Peace and Social Witness Relief Grant, through S4SK. The emergency has necessitated some adjustments to this programme to include income-generating initiatives, and these can be found on pages 12 and 13.

Part 2 - Current work

The impact of pandemic and political emergency on poor communities in Myanmar: Coming on top of the year-long pandemic, Myanmar society is presently convulsed by a military coup which is as yet incomplete. There has been considerable use of force. The combination of coup and pandemic has led to political instability, economic paralysis, and the near collapse of the health system. Every section of society is affected. Even withdrawing one's own money from the bank is problematic, often taking hours of queueing for limited sums.

Food prices are rising; at the time of writing, rice is up by 14%, cooking oil by 44%, salt by 67%, and eggs by over 100%. Some trades are viable; for example, street hawkers, selling snacks like boiled quail eggs and roasted potatoes are still able to trade, though fewer people are on the street. One family, which has a business hawking tiny bottles of liquid soap in the street, saw sales increase initially with the pandemic, then found after the coup, that the factory where they purchased the soap had to close through inability to source raw materials. The majority of our families survive by daily labour, and with factories closing and building projects shelved, life has become increasingly difficult for them. Here is the situation as lived by one of our students, a boy of 13 in one of our NFE classes:

"I studied in the H4SS NFE class for nearly three years. Before the pandemic, I attended class on weekdays and was happy to study with my friends. We often stayed after class to study more. If I did not know something, I could to ask my teacher and she responded immediately. At the start of the pandemic, we learned to use a mask, and wash our hands frequently to be able to keep safe. We could avoid getting sick until now.

Later, the class had to close, and we were taught lessons over the phone. I had to listen to the teacher, reply to her questions and read out loud, all over the phone! I was not happy to learn in this way.

After the coup, we felt not free. Young people like us could be seized and some have been killed. I worry that I might be arrested anytime, and cannot sleep at night. Even when I go out, I do not feel free. My mum sent me to a monastery because she was worried about my safety. There, I helped the monk collect donations, and could study using phone and worksheets from H4SS. I don't like this current situation. I want to be able to live without having to be afraid."

A guiding vision: While the emergency makes everything more difficult, we have a clear sense of the values we strive to maintain, and of the needs of the families whose children we are educating. This poster, displayed at the H4SS office and at the Learning centre expresses our guiding vision.

မျှော်မှန်းချက် (Vision)

မြန်မာနိုင်ငံရှိ အားနည်းသော ခံစားထိခိုက်လွယ်သော ကလေးသူငယ်နှင့် လူငယ်အားလုံးကို လူမျိုး၊ ဘာသာ မခွဲခြားဘဲ၊ ၎င်းတို့၏ နောက်ခံအခြေအနေ၊ စွမ်းရည်တို့နှင့် သင့်လျော်သော အရည်အသွေးပြည့်ပညာရေး၊ လူမှုကူညီထောက်ပံ့မှုနှင့် အလုပ်အကိုင်အခွင့်အလမ်းတို့ပေးခြင်းဖြင့် ၎င်းတို့၏ ပိုမိုကောင်းမွန်သော အနာဂတ်ကို ဖန်တီးနိုင်ရမည်။

Our vision is of better futures for the vulnerable children and youths in Myanmar regardless of ethnic group or religion through provision of quality education attuned to their abilities and backgrounds, social work support, and career opportunities.

A vision to strive for—the mission statement of H4SS

Combining education with social protection is central to our work. However good the education we provide, if we ignore the poverty of families, we will not be able to reach these children.

Getting the right balance: From the start of our work in 2007, we recognized the importance of answering the economic and social needs of families alongside providing accessible education. Even when the economy is functioning well, their children had to work, and so could not attend school. Now, in the emergency situation, they have no savings, and nothing to fall back on. Thus, in the period following the coup, we are placing more emphasis on social protection measures to help families survive. We regularly review each project to make sure it keeps abreast of the situation.

Monthly distribution of food supplies to parents during the emergency

Non-formal education (NFE), family support and social work: The combination of the deteriorating security situation and a sharp rise in infection levels has meant that it has become more and more difficult to run classes in the normal way. Also, loss of income has forced many families to push their children back into work. Our teachers are still active, preparing worksheets and tutoring students during socially-distanced home visits, when they also work out how best to support each family. The cover photo shows Ko Phyo, from our Learning Centre, tutoring a student during one such visit. Current aims are to sustain children's interest and skills, help families survive this difficult period, and avert the need to get further into debt to money-lenders (which can result in children's labour being 'sold' for months or years in advance).

Poverty alleviation and income-generating (IG) projects: The poverty alleviation project started life as a way to help poor parents out of poverty in time for their children to join full-time vocational training, or other further education courses. Parents form savings groups which meet regularly, and as savings increase, are able to make loans at a low rate of interest. In choosing who should receive loans, the savers decided to prioritise: enabling children to study, getting out of debt, and business investment. These loans can then be topped up when required by an additional loan from H4SS. Now, with the loss of many low-paid jobs, we have been using loans to help families start viable trades to provide them with an income in the current situation. Each loan is preceded by workshops in business skills and a realistic business plan.

Hand-cart IG project: Daw Hla Htay (centre) is a daily worker, harvesting crops and making bamboo fishing nets for on average £1.50 - £2.50 per day. Her son and daughter, who work with her, joined our NFE class in 2017 having never been in school. In addition to an existing loan from a money-lender, Daw Hla Htay took an advance against labour in the rainy season, committing both mother and children to work for half pay for two seasons. However, they were still paying off the first loan, forcing them to do additional work in the hot season, plucking beans. By 2020, they were still in debt, so Daw Hla Htay hired a cart to transport vegetables for farmers. The initiative was successful, though the daily rental charge for the cart limited profitability. Then came the pandemic: “Prices of food rose and I worried whether I could feed us all. When I knew that H4SS would deliver food packages each month, I was very happy, as if I had won the lottery.”

After participating in the IG workshop, Hla Htay received a top-up loan to purchase a cart of her own. She joined our saving scheme which helped her save to repay the debts. Now, she has her own business distributing water and carrying goods to and from market: “Not only have I paid back all the loans, but I could purchase materials to repair our house.”

Her daughter commented: “Before we joined the NFE class, people used to look down on us and say that we were illiterate so would always be hawkers. Now, we can read and write well, and have confidence in ourselves. In future we would like to go to school to complete our education.”

Fishing IG project: Daw Aye Aye Myint (H4SS Mentor) writes: “Nine families, from one village (two families pictured above), were in difficulty. Some had lost their jobs: others were fisher folk but with poor equipment. We arranged a workshop on budgeting, business skills and our saving scheme. At first, they refused, thinking that they could borrow and repay as normal with the money-lender. We explained that our purpose is to sustain their businesses with better understanding of budgeting and business skills. Finally, they agreed. During the workshop, one realised the relevance of the scheme, and helped persuade the others. That was our first challenge, and first success also. Our loan was used to buy nets. They agreed to repay monthly, according to their income that month. Once the savings group started, I could see that the parents gained confidence.”

One parent said: “During Covid, the economy was down, but we could still work outside. Since the coup, there has been no work, and we often had to hide in the forest. We were getting more and more in debt, just to eat. When we received the IG loan we felt as if we could breathe again.”

However, there were difficulties. The local NFE Committee chairman explains: “The army declared a night curfew and prohibited fishing in the canal near the village. The villagers had to fish in streams far away but were afraid to stay there overnight, and so could not protect their nets from damage.”

One parent described their success: “So far, every member could save, as agreed. I save monthly money at the group safe-box, and at home with a small box to make the monthly payment. We followed the saving group system and so could repay our debts to the money-lender.”

These loans are all generating much needed income, and helping to secure the future education of 24 children.

Some older students: The provision of opportunities for further education helps to bring real change to young people's lives. The emergency has created obstacles, of course. Here are the stories of some of our students.

Ma Saung Hnin Phyu graduated in Computer Studies last year. She writes: "I'm now working for an ISP as a Network Operation Centre Engineer. I feel happy because I am walking on the career that I want to be. My mum and dad always remind me not to forget anyone who support me to get to this place. They always thank you and I also.

I began with your support and now can develop with my own strength. I wish you success, H4SS."

Naing Maw Lin has been with us for 8 years and is in his first year at CVT: "The Covid period was difficult. My mother used to purchase hair and sell it to a wig factory. When the factory closed because of Covid, she lost her job. I worked day and night as bricklayer, construction worker, painter, and tea-shop waiter to help out. After the coup, travel became risky, and there were fewer jobs. Luckily, I could get a job in a furniture-making factory. Carpentry is my special subject at E4Y and CVT, so I was very glad.

In the future, I would like to open a business, designing my own furniture. I learned in E4Y, that if furniture is packed well, it can be exported safely to any part of the world, and sell for higher prices than in Myanmar. As of now, I can make cupboards and chairs out of teak and other hardwoods."

Helping her father collect and sell cow dung

Ma Wai Lwin Lwin Tun is 15 years old, in her third year at E4Y, and has been with H4SS for 5 years. Her parents are casual labourers earning around £3.50 per day. In 2016, in the face of financial difficulties, her parents withdrew her from school: “I felt devastated, and worried that I would not be able to continue my studies.”

Wai Lwin Lwin’s mother enrolled her in our night-time NFE class in Pyay. She did well, and in 2018, moved to the H4SS Learning Centre, and studied at E4Y: “When I arrived in Hlegu, I missed my parents, and cried often. The teachers encouraged me and made me feel better. At E4Y, I made new friends, and was happy. To begin with, I was weak in English, so I tried really hard and managed to get B or C grades, every month.

During the emergency, I worked with my parents in the morning, and studied computing at the Learning Centre in the afternoon. On Sundays, my friend and I taught word-processing and Power Point to children in the neighbourhood. I like to share what I have learned.”

H4SS supported the family throughout, and helped her mother set up business, selling vegetables. Her father currently sells dried cow dung, which is used as a fertiliser: “We cannot go anywhere, and cannot work now in the midst the crisis. This support (from H4SS) means we don’t have to worry about our daily meal.”

As for Wai Lwin Lwin Tun, she appreciates the culture of E4Y, and has formed an idea of the first step of a career: “At E4Y we learn to make good behaviour, polite speech and respect for others, part of our daily lives. I like to live this way. In future, I would like to work as a hotel receptionist.”

Ma Aye Wut Hmone is a Muslim girl of 17, and has been with us since she was 10 years old. She is in her fourth year at E4Y now and, until the emergency period, was staying at the Learning Centre. Her family are hawkers, selling snacks such as fruit and quails eggs to passing drivers. In her spare time, Aye Wut Hmone still works with her family on the street:

With her family in 2017

Ma Aye Wut Hmone in 2021

“When E4Y changed to online tuition, I joined from the Learning Centre. I found learning this way difficult because we had to wear a mask all the time. However, I got better at typing. Later there was a course of computer training, which I liked.

As the economic situation got worse, there were fewer people on the streets, and so our family’s sales were down to only 5,000 kyats (£2.50) per day. We sell at the bus-stop near the market, so have to take care not to get infected from the customers.

After the coup, selling there became dangerous. You always had to be careful, and look here and there. What can we do! While we are selling on the road, we are afraid: gun-shots can come from anywhere. I am more afraid of the political situation than of the pandemic. No-one has a solution.

My goal is to graduate, after which I hope to work as a teacher with H4SS.”

Mg Thant Zaw Win is 17, in his third year at E4Y, and has been with H4SS for seven years. At the age of 10, he dropped out of school to look after the family's pigs and nurse his ailing father: "I was very sad when I saw my friends go to school on that day, and I could not!"

In 2016, our teacher, Nwe Ni, met the family and encouraged them to enrol him in her NFE class: "His mother frequently tried to withdraw him to help at home, so I had to make many home visits."

Thant Zaw studied well and passed the E4Y entrance in 2018. However, his father's condition was much worse by then and the mother needed to work, so Thant Zaw had to stay at home. Daw Thein Thein Htay, the Learning Centre Principal, persuaded his parents to allow study periods at home, which H4SS supported with home visits. Finally, following a visit of the Non-formal Education Committee, his parents allowed him to attend E4Y: "I cried when my parents did not allow my study at E4Y because that would mean I would have to work as a day-labourer in future, and would lose my dream to become a chef. I couldn't eat or sleep.

When my dad and mum agreed to let me attend E4Y class, I cried with relief that, at last I could get the chance to grasp my dream and could be what I want to be.

Now, during the emergency period, I am working at a needlework factory. However, when the E4Y school reopens, I will come back to the Learning Centre. I am really looking forward to that day!"

An H4SS teacher's story:

Daw San San Oo retired from the civil service in 2010, and set up a business breeding ducks. In her spare time she offered free private tuition to poor schoolchildren in the neighbourhood. Some out-of-school children who were working as water-cress gatherers noticed this, and requested to join the class. When, in 2014, H4SS came to research numbers of out-of-school children in the area, Daw San San Oo offered assistance, and later trained as an H4SS teacher:

“I attended the teacher training, and visited some NFE classes. I learned a new method of teaching based on active learning. Children can easily remember facts and be curious about the world, through active learning. I could see that learning by playing is more effective because children enjoy it and are eager to learn.

Our class started with 10 out-of-school children in 2014, and since then more than 40 children have passed through my class. One girl who had never enrolled in school transferred to government school in 2018. Four more children will go there after the emergency. In preparation for this, I teach these students using the formal school curriculum. When I think of all my students I am proud of being their teacher. They became more respectful to each other, and motivated to learn. Now, they are hungry to read even when the class had to close for the 3rd Covid wave.

There have been challenges. I worried about the virus, so I hung posters above a wash basin at the gate to remind to wash their hands, and took the temperature of each child (see photo p4). To follow the social distancing rule, I taught groups of 5 in 3 shifts; that's 3 days a week for each child. Sometimes, it was 7 pm when my classes were finished, and I was very tired.

Economic pressure on families has resulted in some cases of violent abuse too, so our local NFEC arranged alternative accommodation for several children, several in my own home.

After the coup, an army check-point was set up near my house, so we could not be sure to keep everyone safe since children would have to pass the check-point. To avoid such problems, I prepare self-study worksheets for the students, and give them tuition outside during home visits.”

Messages from the H4SS Governing Board & Programme Director

Daw Khin Toe (Retired Assistant Director of Education): “For more than 10 years, S4SK has supported vulnerable children and their families. With S4SK’s support, the H4SS team have worked to bring hope to their lives. Whenever the director faced difficulties, she consulted the Governing Board and we could find solutions together. It is very satisfying to be able to support out-of-school children and youth with NFE and vocational training to develop their ability. I hope S4SK will continue it in future.”

Daw Myint Myint Shwe (Educational Consultant): “I am so glad, proud and appreciative of the H4SS team’s implementation of a digital environment and provision of support to help children live a normal life and continue their learning, even through the pandemic.”

U Maung Myint (Retired Director of Social Welfare): “Due to the emergency situation in Myanmar, it is difficult for many NGOs to survive and most had to stop their activities. We are very pleased that H4SS has been able to overcome these difficulties, and meet the educational needs of the children during this time. Congratulations to the H4SS leader and staff. Many thanks also to S4SK, the father of H4SS, for its continued support of H4SS.”

Meeting of Governing Board and senior staff members

Daw Aye Aye Thinn (Programme Director): “Contrary to our hopes of improvement, Covid and the coup have badly affected our families. Nevertheless, with the support of our Board and our donors, we could grasp opportunity in the midst of challenges! As the UN’s 4th Sustainable Development Goal asks, all children should have access to primary and secondary education by 2030. We will try to reach this goal in our small corner, and will nurture our students to be good citizens who understand their democratic responsibilities and respect the rights of all sections of Myanmar society.”

Dear Friend and Supporter,

Thank you for your support over the past year. Our priorities at this difficult time are to help families survive without being pushed further into debt, and to sustain our children's progress in learning. We are ready to resume their education as soon as that becomes possible. Whatever the situation, we will find ways to help them!

S4SK is a small charity. Apart from the costs of our appeal, all admin costs at S4SK, including communication and travel, are covered by donation from the trustees, so you can be sure that roughly 99.5% of your donation will go to the work you see here. Please help us to continue to bring hope to the lives of these terribly disadvantaged children.

In friendship,

John McConnell (Managing Trustee, S4SK)

In 2020-21, S4SK raised £83,368 from trusts, individuals and Quaker meetings. £65,769 was transferred to Myanmar (though the final payment was delayed by the emergency), and £369.20 was spent on fundraising and bank charges. To guarantee continuity of classes we retain 10 months operating costs in reserve. Designated expenditure for 2021-2 is currently £72,000, though this may increase as we respond to the emergency. Full accounts are available on the Charity Commission website, or from the treasurer.

How H4SS spent the S4SK donation

Please support our work:

1. By cheque or charity voucher to the treasurer at the address below, and made payable to Scholarships for Street Kids;
